MEGAN ANGELL

2017 SIMPSON ESSY PRIZE WINNER

Congratulations to Megan Angell '19 who is the 2017 winner of the Simpson Essay Prize for her essay titled Infinity, Mathematics, and God.

Megan has served on the exec board for the Catholic Students Association and is a graduating from the Catholic Scholars Program this year.

Megan will present her essay in a public lecture in the fall of next year. Congratulations, Megan!

The Kenneth C. Simpson Essay Prize is designed to promote serious thought and reflection about the foundations and/or influence of Catholic thought in every field of study.

Students who enter their essays will have done serious research into the ways in which Catholic theology, philosophy and imagination have stimulated intellectual discourse — and, in many cases, furthered the development of a field.

As a consultant to a local transgender support group for its educational outreach programs, Ozar has known many transgender persons. He will explain the meaning of key terms (“gender identity,” “transgender,” “transsexual” etc.), reflect on our Christian commitment to respect and support the worth of every person, and discuss the ways in which our society has and has not been respectful towards transgender persons.

The St. Athanasius Peace and Justice Ministry is sponsoring his talk.
